
I have been working regularly with the advanced video workshop since February of this year. Each week we would start with a physical warm-up that put us more in touch with our feelings. Then we would work together as a group using those feelings in a video piece. I dealt with different art forms such as movement, painting, and acting in terms of video. By learning how to successfully integrate the art form with the video we are starting to develop new concepts and ideas for video pieces. This show grew out of these meetings.

I wish to dedicate this show to Shirley Kaplan and the Painters' Theatre Company for teaching me a very special approach to work. Their way of using newspaper and personal material is used in the open workshop.
